Music Director / Organist

Hannah Albrecht

Hannah has been the organist at Church of the Messiah since 2008, following her graduation from Bryn Mawr College. Throughout college, she studied organ with Clair Rozier, and piano with Matt Bengtson and Curt Cacioppo. She also became interested in composition, and several of her works for organ, piano, and voice have debuted at Messiah.

Hannah has continued her music education through the Baroque Performance Institute at Oberlin College, where she has had inspiring master classes with organists Patrick Allen and James David Christie, as well as introductions to the harpsichord and Baroque dance. Hannah's work as an accompanist includes several concerts and rehearsals for all-male a cappella group Cordus Mundi. She also is the administrative assistant for Philadelphia Sinfonia youth orchestra.
